Life is rarely a smooth journey, and it is often the small, everyday fluctuations that shape people's attitudes (1) _____ profoundly. Moments of success and disappointment tend to occur side by side, reminding individuals that stability is not a permanent state but a temporary balance. Only when these contrasts are fully appreciated, (2) _____ people begin to develop emotional resilience. Minor setbacks, such as missed opportunities or brief failures, are frequently dismissed (3) _____ insignificant. Yet, it is often after such experiences that individuals reflect most deeply on their expectations. (4) _____ everything always gone according to plan, many important lessons would never have been learned. At the same time, small victories can have a powerful impact. A kind word, a modest achievement, or unexpected support may restore motivation at precisely the right moment. Rarely do people recognise how these seemingly trivial events influence their confidence and sense of direction. What is particularly challenging is maintaining perspective when circumstances change suddenly. When faced with uncertainty, many realise to (5) _____ extent they have become dependent on routine. If people (6) _____ better prepared for change, temporary difficulties might feel less overwhelming. It should also be acknowledged that emotional responses to life's ups and downs vary widely. What (7) _____ considered manageable by one person may feel deeply unsettling to another. This diversity of experience highlights the importance of empathy and self-awareness. Ultimately, the ability to cope depends on the meaning that individuals attach to events. Not only does acceptance reduce frustration, but it also encourages growth. Were (8) _____ greater emphasis placed on reflection rather than control, life's fluctuations might be seen as opportunities rather than obstacles. In this sense, it is through navigating small changes, rather than dramatic turning points, (9) _____ character is gradually formed. Life's ups and downs, though often subtle, play a crucial role in shaping who people become (10) _____ time.

Mărturisesc de la început că eu sunt unul dintre aceia care vorbesc singuri pe stradă. Asta ar însemna de fapt că mai port cu mine cel puțin pe cineva. Iar problema nu se pune dacă este bine sau rău, ci dacă este frumos sau urât să vorbești singur. Lucrul acesta se află așezat la loc de cinste în șiragul indecențelor stabilite alături de strănut sau căscat, gesturi cât se poate de normale deci. Este într-adevăr indecent să o faci când mai este cineva cu tine, cineva adevărat, dar gândeți-vă ce s-ar fi făcut Robinson Crusoe dacă ar fi respectat conveniențele! Or, trebuie să recunoașteți că, în mijlocul unui oraș mare ca al nostru, nu poți fi decât singur. Și atunci cum se poate oare trăi fără să ieși cu tine un gând sau o persoană să-ți țină de urât?

Când m-am mutat pe strada aceasta, am crezut un timp că este chiar așa cum pare a fi: pustie și tăcută. Asta până într-o zi când, ridicând ochii spre balconul de deasupra, am văzut privirea vecinei mele care nu mai are nicio treabă de vreo treizeci de ani, stă acolo chiar când n-o zărești. Când am văzut-o, m-am fâstăcit, n-am știut ce să fac cu mâinile și până la urmă m-am trezit că îi spun "bună dimineața!". Și așa ne-am împrietenit.
